Treatment Bill - Comments

Dear Friends:

This year our nation has paused to recall the significance of a very special document that upholds the fundamental laws and principles for governing this country - our Constitution. Alumni and friends have also been reminded about the Lycoming legacy of academic service to generations of students.

For slightly more than 175 years, Lycoming College has been responding to the needs of society by providing personalized, value-centered educational programs. Throughout our history, we have gained strength from the support of generous individuals who recognized the values of private higher education and invested their personal resources in the lives of our students.

Those of us on the campus are pleased to celebrate publicly our right to live and work in a democratic society as citizens of the United States of America. We have also enjoyed a special opportunity to celebrate the rich heritage of Lycoming College and its academic contributions to generations of students. We celebrate, too, those friends listed among the pages of this Quarterly who continue the tradition of philanthropic support for the educational objectives of this fine institution.

The evidence of Lycoming's success comes to light through the personal and professional accomplishments of our alumni. We hope future generations will leave this campus even more intellectually, morally and socially prepared to contribute to communities where they live and work than did their predecessors. With adequate resources, prudent management and good stewardship that dream is within our grasp. When that day comes, it will be time for another celebration.

Sincerely,

Editor's Note: The following article appeared in the May 4, 1987, editions of the Williamsport Sun-Gazette. It is reprinted with permission.

Nobel Peace Prize recipient Elie Wiesel brought his message of peace and vigilance to Williamsport yesterday, urging graduating seniors at Lycoming College to not forget the rest of mankind as they pursue their chosen careers.

Wiesel, a survivor of the Nazi death camps of World War II, spoke before nearly 3,000 persons gathered in Lamade Gymnasium for the college's 139th annual commencement. He was awarded an honorary doctor of humanities degree by the college, which also is celebrating 175 years of existence.

At a brief press conference following the ceremonies, the diminutive, soft-spoken author and teacher said nuclear proliferation is now "the most pressing problem" of mankind and answered questions on a number of other world issues.

He received plaques from the local Jewish community and from the Lycoming County Chapter of the National Conference of Christians and Jews for his work to promote brotherhood among people of all races and religions.

"I do not want my past to be your future," Wiesel told the 189 graduating seniors, saying he was one with them because of the degree he received. "There is so much evil in the world... We must fight it with vigor, unless we want to become victims ourselves."

"What you have to remember is that nothing is as essential in human endeavor as human relations," he said, noting the current trend in American society to ignore all else in pursuit of personal achievement. "To be insensitive to the suffering of others is the first step toward being insensitive to one's own life."

A Romanian-born Jew whose parents and a sister were among six million Jews killed by the Nazis, Wiesel spoke of a reawakening of racism in the United States and warned the audience, "If there are people breeding hatred, take them seriously."

It took Adolf Hitler 12 years to rise to power and begin his campaign to exterminate the Jewish population of Europe, he said. "We did not take them seriously in the 1930s, and we paid for it," he said matter-of-factly.

There was no anger or exhortation in Wiesel's delivery. Short and thin, with a care-worn face, he spoke in a calm, even voice that bears accents of the Eastern European and Yiddish languages of his youth, plus the French he learned as a student in Paris after the war and still uses in most of his writings.

A naturalized citizen since 1963, he now is a professor of humanities at Boston University.

At the new conference, he said he is not afraid that the United States and the Soviet Union might start a nuclear war. "The United States has controls over their

"The opposite of love is not hate; it is indifference... The opposite of life is not death; it is indifference to life and to death."

What worries him, though, is the possibility that some radical leader of a small, militant country might obtain atomic bombs.

Try to picture a Khomeini (revolutionary religious ruler of Iran) or a Muammar Gadhafi (of Lybia) or an Idi Amin (former dictator of Uganda) with such weapons. Would they hesitate to use them?"

What is needed is a treaty among all nuclear-armed nations to stop the arms race and block other countries from obtaining atomic weapons, he said.

Wiesel suggested the best place for a nuclear summit is Hiroshima, the Japanese city destroyed by the first atomic bomb dropped by the United States during World War II. He said he will go there this week to appeal to President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to convene just such a meeting.

"The place to discuss nuclear disarmament is not Iceland but Hiroshima, just as the best place to discuss human rights is not Helsinki (Finland) but Auschwitz (the most infamous of the Nazi death camps). I think Reagan and Gorbachev would speak much differently there than they did in Iceland," he said.

On the continuing battle between Israel and the Arab states, he said he sees signs that "something is getting ready to happen there...I think there may be some good surprise very soon."

Wiesel also was asked if the United States denying a visa last week to Austrian President Kurt Waldheim because of his service in the German army during World War II and the recent expulsions of former Nazis from this country for war crimes were indications of a new campaign to avenge the victims of the Holocaust.

He replied that he does not believe in revenge. To use such cases for vengeance "cheapens our experiences." The continuing hunt for those involved in the atrocities is valuable only to remind the world of what happened.

"If society forgets the lessons of history, it will increase the danger of those events coming back," he added.

He said the world has made progress in the past 50 years. Most countries now are concerned about human rights and respond quickly to violations. But not enough has been done.

There are 40 wars going on around the world today, he said, citing the "Medieval war" in Northern Ireland and the terror attacks of Tamil separatists in Sri Lanka as examples. Jews still are being persecuted in the Soviet Union and blacks are being denied freedom in South Africa, he added.

He said he does not know the solutions to all those problems. "But silence is not the answer.

I have had many failures in my life," he said, "but that has not stopped me or made me give in to despair."

He was asked by a young girl in the audience at the news conference how he can trust the Soviets, whom he has had much dealings with lately on trying to free Jewish "refusniks" jailed there and denied permission to emigrate to Israel.

Wiesel replied that he only trusts Gorbachev and the new Soviet leadership to the degree they prove they deserve it. He said they have begun to release imprisoned Jews and allowed more emigration, indicating they are making some efforts at reform.

"Gorbachev told me he did not have them (the refusniks) jailed, it was done by his predecessors. He asked me to give him a chance, and he has made good on his promise."

"The place to discuss nuclear disarmament is not Iceland but Hiroshima, just as the best place to discuss human rights is not Helsinki (Finland) but Auschwitz (the most infamous of the Nazi death camps). I think Reagan and Gorbachev would speak much differently there than they did in Iceland."

In closing his commencement address, he said he has learned the greatest enemy of human rights is indifference.

"The opposite of love is not hate; it is indifference...The opposite of life is not death; it is indifference to life and to death."

He asked the students to remember the lessons of the Holocaust and to do everything they can to fight racism, religious discrimination, hunger and other human rights violations.

"If you fight, the victory is yours. And if it is yours, it also is mine."

American novelist Thomas Wolfe once observed "You Can't Go Home Again." William A. Schreyer, chairman and chief executive officer of Merrill Lynch and Co. Inc., proved Wolfe wrong by making a quick trip back to Williamsport to speak at Lycoming College and take part in the dedication of the new Merrill Lynch office. The office was dedicated in memory of his father, William F. Schreyer, who served as the firm's first local office manager from 1936 until his death in 1952.

It was an "emotional and gratifying" return home for a man who grew up in Williamsport during the Great Depression and went on to become chairman of one of the world's leading financial institutions.

Schreyer said his visit back to his roots and the dedication "brought back such a flood of memories. They're good memories - of the College, the town, the people, the time I spent here."

Observing that the city "looked different now" than it did when he was living here, Schreyer opined "In all my visits home I'm still struck by the strong sense of community: people pulling together, helping one another, joined by a sense of common purpose and mutual respect. That's one of the things that have always made me proud of Williamsport."

Schreyer said he was genuinely impressed with Williamsport's spirit. "The town has managed to embrace the new without forgetting the old, preserving the best of the past while adapting to changing times and circumstances, never giving up, always fighting on, always coming back."

"Williamsport has managed to embrace the new without forgetting the old, preserving the best of the past while adapting to changing times and circumstances, never giving up, always fighting on, always coming back."

On the topic of the changing worldwide financial picture, Schreyer retold the story of his early days on Wall Street. "We could go out the door, walk a couple of blocks in each direction and pass the offices of most of our competitors. Now we operate in 24 countries and time zones all at once. We live in a financial world where 24-hour trading is becoming a daily reality and the global financial system is rapidly becoming one market with no time zone."

"This rapid development means we have to work together to ensure that markets are kept both open and fair. It feels the financial community has to establish a coordinated set of rule-making and a leveling field level."

William A. Schreyer, chairman and chief executive officer of Merrill Lynch and Co., was the featured speaker at the College's 175th concluding anniversary event. He received an honorary degree from Lycoming College in 1981.

Commenting on recent revelations of insider trading by investors to amass enormous profits, Schreyer said he is "outraged at the insider trading scandals that have rocked Wall Street."

"When schemers use stolen information to manipulate the markets in ways that violate every standard we try to uphold, the losers are more than the buyers and sellers they defraud. The losers are all of us - all who depend on honesty and fairness in the financial marketplace, which must be fair and must be seen to be open and fair."

Schreyer charged that whoever violates the integrity of financial markets "offends against every one of us and deserves to be met with the full force of the law. The sooner we get all the rot cut out, the better for all of us."

"Ok, we're going on four minutes from now mark it four minutes," said the broadcaster to a confused disc jockey back on the board at the studio. Is this the Super Bowl about to be broadcast, the NBA Finals, a World Series game? No, try a Middle Atlantic Conference Division III basketball game from Lycoming College's Lamade Gymnasium.

The headsets the broadcasters wear are the same Vin Scully and Joe Garagiola display on NBC's Game of the Week. The mixer used is comparable to the one a quality local station uses to broadcast the Little League World Series across the country. However, the two people behind the microphones are not Vin or Joe and are not broadcasting a "major" sporting event. The two sportscasters are Lycoming College students broadcasting the game over Lycoming's student radio station, WRLC.

For a college station, WRLC gives the listeners extensive sports coverage. The sports department encompasses all Lycoming football games and this past year a total of 30 men's and women's basketball contests. How does it work and why do we work our way through all the problems to bring the coverage back to the listeners? The answers are simple. In theory it is very easy to transmit a game over the air and it is a fun and rewarding experience. However, when thinking back to my sophomore year (1986-1987) the word jinxed frequently does come to mind.

" 'What do you mean they came back,' said my friend. 'You guys went off the air with eight minutes to go. I could not believe it.' "

After working 25 basketball and four football games my first year at Lycoming, I came back for my sophomore year prepared to be sports director of the station. The first football broadcast of the year went very well. However, the second football contest made the word jinxed a prominent part of my vocabulary!

Bill Byham (the voice of Lycoming football) and I were at Susquehanna University for an early MAC showdown. Lycoming completely controlled the game for the first three quarters, but the roof caved in during the fourth stanza. The Crusaders scored 21 points in the last eight minutes (the final seven tallies coming on a 'Hail-Mary' pass on the last play of the game) to win the dual 43-42. As Byham later reflected, "It was the most amazing eight minutes of football I ever announced." And that came from a man who has broadcasted sporting events in the Susquehanna Valley for 26 years.

...3, 2, 1... Ken Weingartner (left) and Tom Speicher prepare to broadcast the unexpected from Lamade Gymnasium.

We were both stunned and dejected the way the Warriors lost, but the real surprise came when we returned to campus. The first people we saw at Lycoming were a group of freshman players who did not travel with the football squad. They were throwing a ball around in the parking lot without a care in the world. A strange reaction we thought from a group of players who 24 hours later knew they would go through a punishing practice session because of the loss.

Without giving their actions much thought, I went back to my room and immediately called a friend to find out how the game sounded. After the usual greetings, I got right to the point and said, "Did we get too excited when Susquehanna came back?" "What do you mean they came back," said my friend. "You guys went off the air with eight minutes to go." I could not believe it. One of the greatest comebacks I ever saw did not go over the air because as I later found out the phone company disconnected us.

Broadcasting a game is just like making one long phone call to the radio station. We hook the mixer to our phone at the place where the broadcast originates. We then call the station, and the person working the board puts us over the air via the phone line. The one problem with our mixer is we can not hear what is going out over the station. We can only hear what we are saying, so there is no way of knowing on our part if we get disconnected. No, sometimes radio is not fair. By the way, our phone company for the Susquehanna game, after repeated denials of making any mistakes, reimbursed us for the lost air time. However it still does not make me feel any better.

1987 marks the Bicentennial Anniversary of the Constitution of the United States of America, the oldest national constitution in existence in the world today. Yet in those same two-hundred years, the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania has had five constitutions, these being enacted in 1776, 1790, 1838, 1874 and 1968. There are many possible explanations for this, but most of them stem from the nature of the constitutions themselves and their methods of mutual interactions.

Pennsylvania's first constitution, enacted in 1776, was comparatively liberal in nature. This relative liberal framework is quite understandable when put into historical context. In 1776 the American Revolution was just gearing up, and the constitution was tailored to the values espoused by the revolutionaries, including a weak plural executive and public overview of the Assembly. Obviously, this constitution was controversial from the very beginning.

The Constitution of 1790 was a reaction against its predecessor, and thus was more conservative. After the war, conservatives managed to regain control of the state government, and the new constitution reflected their views. A single, more powerful executive was put into place, and the unicameral legislature was replaced by a bicameral legislature. Members of the judiciary were made appointive by the governor to serve for good behavior.

“The Conservative Constitution of 1790 was just as doomed as its predecessor. Although this document lasted slightly longer, it never really stood a chance because just as the pendulum swung back to the conservative side, it was a foregone conclusion that it would swing back toward the center.”

Just as the 1776 Constitution was unpopular among conservatives, the 1790 Constitution was unpopular among liberals. Consequently, in 1838 a compromise constitution was enacted. None of the factions at the convention had a majority, so two groups acting in coalition formed a majority. The basic government structure from the Constitution of 1790 was retained, but some authority was taken from the governor and the legislative branch; many more elected offices were added. Because there were several other compromises in the document, it passed only narrowly when submitted to the voters for ratification. This document was amended several times and remained in effect until 1874.

The Constitution of 1874 was longer and more detailed than any of its predecessors. The political atmosphere at the time when this constitution was passed was one of distrust of legislative bodies and growing corporate power. It originated in an era when the dominant theme was reform of social evils. The concern was to set up safeguards against past abuses and to prevent corruption. The expanding economy and the industrialization of society led people to believe that change was necessary. This constitution was a product of these concerns; in fact, many of the fundamental tenets of this constitution still exist.

As it became increasingly clear that the Constitution of 1874 could not cope with all of the problems of the twentieth century, there were calls for still another constitution. The result was the Revised Constitution of 1968. This revision took place in three steps: (1) Amendments dealing with public officers and oaths of offices were added in 1966; (2) Amendments were passed in 1967 to revise partially or completely the articles dealing with the executive and legislative branches, private corporations, elections and amendments to the constitution; (3) The people voted to call a limited Constitutional Convention in 1969 in which sections dealing with legislative reapportionment, state finance, taxation, and the state judiciary were revised. This is the document that is currently in effect in the Commonwealth.

The earlier constitutions seem to have been victims of themselves more than anything else, and it seems clear that they were not conceived through pluralism and pragmatism. The constitution of 1776 was too liberal for its time, so the natural reaction would be a conservative backlash. The framers of that document should have been aware that they were not forming a truly representative constitution; they should have known that the conservatives in the Eastern regions of the state would not approve of their final product. Consequently, it was inevitable that this constitution would not last. With the post-Revolutionary War economic problems, the conservatives came back into power and demanded a new charter.

Apparently, the conservatives did not learn much from the liberals who held sway before them. The Conservative Constitution of 1790 was just as doomed as its predecessor. Although this document lasted slightly longer, it never really stood a chance because just as the pendulum swung back to the conservative side, it was a foregone conclusion that it would swing back toward the center. The result was, of course, the Compromise Constitution of 1830. This was merely the logical progression from its predecessors.

Another possible explanation for the number of Pennsylvania constitutions is the idea that they are not as responsive to the times as is the national constitution. The Constitution of 1874 grew out of the heightened awareness of the people of Pennsylvania to the problems of their own era. Simply put, its predecessor was not able to cope with the problems of the industrial age. People began to realize that the Constitution of 1838 could not protect them from the ravages wrought by unrestrained industrialists. Increased social concerns also played a role in the fall of the document. The people wanted guarantees that they would be protected from election fraud and crooked politicians, and they realized that the Compromise Constitution could not do this. They also wanted some means to curtail the legislative powers that had become quite abusive in some cases.

In roughly the same manner that its predecessor expired, so died the 1874 charter. It was simply not able to handle twentieth-century needs. Some of the reasoning behind the document was faulty, and, in some cases, downright naive. For example, limiting legislative power serves to eliminate possible solutions to problems rather than serving the public interest. Despite the fact that quite a few amendments were added, the basic framework was not changed, and the constitution remained just as restrictive. This critical design flaw, i.e. the lack of a means to endure over time, was ultimately the downfall of the Reform Constitution.

On the other hand, the Constitution of the United States of America has no such flaw. It was designed in such a way as to be immune from the restrictive influences of the state constitution. The national constitution has the ability, especially through the courts, to evolve with the times. When attitudes and values change, so does the constitution. A prime example of this can be seen during the civil rights movement. When the time was right, the courts gradually move the constitution to a point where it could cope with the new ideals. In fact, certain cases, such as the famous Brown v. The Board of Education of Topeka

(1954) case, which essentially mandated racial integration, have completely flipped the meaning of the Constitution as it was previously understood. Thus, in that case and in many others like it, the United States Constitution has clearly demonstrated great flexibility. A more detailed and rigid document would never have been able to withstand such radical changes. A constitution lacking this inherent flexibility may very well have fallen.

Related to this is the fact that the U.S. Constitution is far less detailed than the Pennsylvania State Constitution. The national constitution was conceived in a spirit of "majestic vagueness," while it is fairly obvious that the framers of the state constitution did not follow this maxim. In fact, the state constitution is several times longer. The details of the national constitution have been filled in through such things as customs, court cases, and in rare instances, amendments. This allows the national constitution to endure through almost every conceivable attitudinal change and compensate for changing times. The Pennsylvania Constitution is much more rigid by virtue of the fact that it is more detailed. Provisions are spelled out much more clearly in this document, and every attention is paid to clarity. While eliminating much of the ambiguity, this is also bad in that flexibility is diminished, thereby contributing to the lack of endurance over time.

Further to be considered is the fact that it is easier to amend or even eliminate a state constitution than it is to amend the national constitution. The process by which the Constitution of the United States of America must be amended is so tedious that it is rarely even attempted, and even then often fails to succeed. Any amendment

Class Year: 1966

Major: Psychology

Home: Tampa, Florida

Profession: President, Premier Investment Properties, Inc., Real Estate Development and Commercial Brokerage

Hobbies: Snow skiing, tennis, sailing, golf

Latest Accomplishment: Received the 4th annual Hillsborough County (FLA) City Planning award for Small Commercial Development of the Year.

Why I Do What I Do: Developing land allows me to make a statement—a statement that has an on-going effect on the community and the business environment. One can sell buildings all year long and the effect of that may or may not have any impact on the community. However, when you build something of quality it has a positive impact on the community. That may sound a little Quixotish, but I honestly believe in leaving the land in a better state than I found it.

Profile: Hard working, very persistent. If I see a goal and believe in it I usually get the job done. I enjoy working with people in order to achieve common goals.

Lycoming Recollection: I remember Lycoming as a tight, caring, small community, that really looked out for one another. I remember the friendliness that prevailed, particularly within my own fraternity, Lambda Chi, but also with other fraternities. My four years at Lycoming enabled me to develop a clear picture of myself...who I was and where I wanted to go. I realized that I could go anywhere I wanted and accomplish anything I set my mind to do.

Lycoming Experience: Lycoming College gave me the ability to learn how to learn. College taught me the ability to take facts in and use them.

August 25, 1983 - a day I'll never forget. My parents helped me unload my belongings into Skeath Hall, room 209. Here I was with about 30 boxes in an empty room at a college called Lycoming. My parents, both teary eyed, kissed me goodbye. I sat down on a bare mattress and cried because I felt so afraid and lonely. I looked out the window and I realized that I didn't know anyone on campus.

Now, as I reflect back on my four years at Lycoming, my feelings are indescribable. What do you say about a place which has created part of the person who you are! How do you convey to another the emotions which have transpired over four years? As I write, many tears come to my eyes. Tears of happiness and tears of sadness. I feel happy because my parents provided me with the most enormous opportunity any parents could give their children - the change to attend college. Without their devotion, guidance, and love I would have never made it. I am so thankful to have such wonderful parents.

“Developing a person is a lifelong process. Lycoming College never placed any restrictions on exploring oneself...a necessity in order to prepare for live.”

I feel unhappy because I had to leave and say goodbye to a college and to people who have been incredibly special to me for four years. Although I am tremendously excited and eager about my career, leaving college for the last time following graduation was one of the hardest things I ever had to do.

I believe that people and experiences become so much a part of us that we fail to recognize their enormous role in our behavior and thoughts. I failed to understand how much attending Lycoming had added to my life. Now, I ask myself how could I have been so naive?

Developing a person is a lifelong process. Lycoming College never placed any restrictions on exploring oneself, which in my opinion is a necessity in order to prepare for life. What can I attribute Lycoming's unique qualities to? Could it be the dynamic people? Could it be the total commitment to excellence? Could it be that Lycoming continually strives for improvement? Realistically, I feel that the success of the institution is not due to one distinct quality. It is a culmination of different aspects. Lycoming should rejoice in the fact that it has a fine heritage to celebrate and an extraordinary future to create. The fact that Lycoming recently celebrated its 175th year is indicative of success.

No one can create self happiness but oneself. Lycoming has helped me to obtain self happiness. It has provided me insight about others as well as myself -more importantly I was able to be myself.

As I prepare for the world before me, I am deeply grateful to my professors and to the administration whose genuine dedication allowed me to gain a heightened awareness of myself. Without these truly sincere individuals, Lycoming would be an average college. Instead, Lycoming is a superior institution for higher education. At Lycoming you are treated as an individual rather than a number. At many educational institutions the professors are just there to put down a grade. The administrators and professors at Lycoming know you and encourage you to accomplish your personal best. It is these people who make a great difference to the college.

Many times during my four years I thought that I would never hold a BA degree in my hands due to an extremely arduous workload. If it weren't for my professors, administrators and my dear friends giving me advice, I wouldn't have made it.

I will be forever grateful to Lycoming College for it has created much of the person I have become. As a freshman I felt insecure, apprehensive and frustrated in a place where I had to call "home" for four years. Now as a confident, zealous and educated human being, I can honestly say that I don't know what I would have done without you Lycoming - Thank you.

R. Michael O'Brien was recently hired as the dean of student services at Lycoming College. He succeeds Jack Buckle who retired after 30 years.

O'Brien comes to Lycoming from Mars Hill College in Mars Hill, North Carolina, where he held the position of dean of student development and assistant professor of education.

He earned a Doctor of Education from the University of Tennessee in 1979, both the Master of Sacred Theology (1967) and a Bachelor of Divinity (1966) from Southern Methodist University, and a Bachelor of Arts from the University of Chattanooga in 1963.

Four employees at Lycoming College, including three alumni, have attained professional advancement.

Rita Ciurlino '84 advanced from her three years as an admissions counselor to director of admissions.

Chris Eck MacGill '77 is now the director of alumni and parent relations. She had been working as the assistant director since 1985.

Ralph E. Zeigler '70 is the new director of development for annual support. Since 1983, Zeigler had worked as the director of alumni and parent relations.

Dr. Doris Parrish, assistant professor of nursing, has been named acting chair of the nursing department. Parrish recently received her Ph.D. in nursing.

Judd W. Staples was recently hired as dean of admissions and financial aid.

Staples comes to Lycoming from Central Wyoming College in Riverton, Wyoming, where he held the position of director of admissions, records and financial aid, and was also an adjunct instructor of computer science since 1983.

According to Dr. Shirley Van Marter, academic dean of the college, "Staples will be a member of the President's Cabinet and will be further developing the working relationship between the financial aid and admission departments at the college."

Staples earned his B.A. in political science and his M.A. in public administration from Pepperdine University in Malibu, California. He is currently a Ph.D. candidate in higher education at Claremont Graduate School in southern California.

Three assistant professors have joined the Lycoming College faculty for the 1987 - 88 academic year. Dr. Joseph H. Bularzik and Dr. Chris E. McDonald joined the department of chemistry. Dr. Richard A. Weida is the new assistant professor of mathematics.

In 1987, Dr. Bularzik received his Ph.D. in physical chemistry from the University of California at Berkeley. He has been working there as a research assistant. Dr. Bularzik earned his B.S. magna cum laude in chemistry from Arizona State in 1982. He is a member of the American Chemical Society, Materials Research Society and the Phi Lambda Upsilon National Honorary Chemical Society.

Dr. McDonald comes to Lycoming from Berea College in Kentucky where he has been an assistant professor since 1986. He earned his Ph.D. in 1985 from Miami University in Oxford, Ohio; in 1981 he was graduated from Manchester College, N. Manchester, Indiana, with a B.S. in medical technology. Dr. McDonald was a Manchester Scholar from 1977 - 81. He has submitted research material for publication.

Dr. Weida earned his Ph.D. and M.S. degrees from the University of Delaware; his B.S. in mathematics and physics is from Muhlenberg College. For the past year, Dr. Weida has lectured on discrete mathematics, finite mathematics and an analysis of algorithms. He is a member of The American Mathematical Society (AMS) and The Mathematical Association of America (MAA).

GTE Employees from Montoursville Lighting Plant and the Williamsport/Muncy Electronic Components and Materials Division presented Lycoming College president, Frederick E. Blumer, with a check for $11,500. This gift is the first of three designated to help provide resources for future capital expansion of the campus. Pictured are from left: Judy Bower, office clerk, Williamsport/Muncy Plants; President Blumer; Marian Gordner, president, Sylvania Employees' Association, Williamsport/Muncy Plants; Judy Reid, president, Sylvania's Employees' Association, Montoursville Plant; and Cynthia Armstrong, supervisor, Montoursville Plant, alumna of Lycoming College. Assisting, but not pictured in the presentation were James Tyson, plant manager, Montoursville Plant; Frederick Howard, vice president and general manager, and Dennis Reed, director-human resources, both representing the Williamsport/Muncy Plants. Tyson is also a graduate of Lycoming College.

Lycoming College's Department of Nursing recently received its initial eight year accreditation from the National League for Nursing, the only designated accrediting agency for nursing education. The accreditation decision, which came at the earliest date the College was eligible to apply, is retroactive to the first nursing graduating class of May, 1986.

According to Dr. Doris Parrish, acting chair of Lycoming's Department of Nursing, "accreditation of the program indicates to the public and educational community that our nursing program has clear and appropriate educational objectives and provides the resources to fill these objectives."

Sara Williamson, executive director of the North Central District, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania Department of Health, hailed the accreditation as "an exciting development for the state." According to Williamson, "Lycoming's B.S.N. graduates are now eligible for state civil service, careers in the nursing and health care field. Accreditation is testimony to the high quality baccalaureate program in nursing as recognized by professional peers."

Donald Creamer, president of The Williamsport Hospital and Medical Center, noted "the accreditation of Lycoming's nursing program further strengthens our clinical affiliation with Lycoming College and assures our community that the graduates of the program will be of the highest caliber." Creamer added, "since the inception of the program it was the College's commitment to establish a high quality baccalaureate program. The accreditation is testimony to their achievement."

James E. Smith, executive vice president of Divine Providence Hospital in Williamsport, said "The Lycoming College nursing program is certainly a valuable asset to the community and area healthcare providers. We look forward to our continued relationship, not only of utilizing the hospital during the education process, but also hiring the graduates who have proven to be dedicated to providing quality nursing care."

Graduation from an accredited program helps to ensure the quality of the student's education and is required for many nursing scholarships, including those from the Armed Forces and the Veteran Administration Hospitals. Graduation from an NLN accredited nursing program is also required for graduate study in nursing. College President Dr. Frederick E. Blumer called the accreditation "another example of the quality of the Lycoming College academic experience."

Jennifer Fries '87, Williamsport, placed second in the psychology/behavioral science category during the 41st annual Eastern Colleges Science Conference (ECSC) held at Lycoming College April 23-25. Her paper was titled "The Effect of Parental Eye Color on the Tendency of Students to Respond to Pupil Size." Fries has been accepted at Penn State to study clinical psychology.

Twenty-two college and universities from the eastern United States participated in the three-day conference that provides an annual forum for the presentation of undergraduate research in the natural, physical and social sciences, as well as mathematics. Of the 191 registered participants, 124 presented research papers in 15 areas on Friday and Saturday. Colleges attending included Ohio State University, Georgetown University, Providence College, West Point Military Academy and Duquesne University.

The first ECSC was organized in 1947 by an undergraduate student at Vassar College in Poughkeepsie, New York. The aim then, as now, was to stimulate interest in undergraduate research in the sciences and related fields and to provide a lively forum for the presentation of research papers.

The Broadway smash CATS, The Royal Winnipeg Ballet, the Northeastern Pennsylvania Philharmonic Orchestra and Late Great Ladies of Blues and Jazz comprise the 1987-88 Lycoming College Artist Series.

The series opens September 27th at 3 p.m. with the regionally acclaimed, 80-member Northeastern Pennsylvania Philharmonic. Once again, the orchestra will highlight 1982 Avery Fisher Prize recipient Horacio Gutierrez, pianist. This year's program features the works of Brahms and Rachmaninoff.

The performance, as with all other series events, takes place at the Capitol Theatre in downtown Williamsport. All seats for each event are reserved.

The orchestra gives way to the acrobatic grace and beauty of The Royal Winnipeg Ballet on October 22 at 8 p.m. Canada's oldest existing professional ballet comes to Williamsport with a 25 member dance team, orchestra and dazzling sets and costumes.

CATS, the highly acclaimed Broadway musical, leaps across the Capitol's stage on February 11th at 8 p.m. The winner of seven Tony awards, including Best Musical, CATS is guaranteed to delight both young and old with its magnificent costumes and sets. The performance will be given by the national touring company.

Late Great Ladies of Blues and Jazz brings the season to a close on March 10th at 8 p.m. Starring Sandra Reaves-Phillips and the All Star Jazz Band, the show recreates the essences of the legendary Bessie Smith, Ma Rainey, Ethel Waters, Billie Holiday and Dinah Washington. In a stunning individual performance Reaves-Phillips captures the aura of each lady while becoming a presence equal to these jazz greats...classy, powerful and unique.

For information on ticket availability call the Lycoming College box office at 321-4048, Noon - 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The school day no longer ends at 2:35 P.M. for five Bishop Neumann High School students. In fact, at this time these scholars have barely begun what most of them consider to be their most difficult class. This class is taken at Lycoming College. The students involved are seniors Heather Chapman, Elizabeth Lundy, Margaret Rider, and Gabriela Rife, and junior, Robert LeFever.

Heather, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Chapman, Margaret, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rider, and Gabriela, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. David Rife, are all currently taking Genetics at the College three days a week. Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lundy, is enrolled in Calculus I, while Rob, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles LeFever, is taking Pre-Calculus. They take these courses in addition to carrying full schedules at Bishop Neumann.

This is not the first semester that Bishop Neumann students have taken classes at Lycoming College. Last semester, Jenefer Davies, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alan Davies, Therese Logue, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Logue, and Elizabeth Lundy all took Pre-Calculus and received among the highest grades in the class. Other Neumann students have taken classes at the College for several years.

However, this is the first semester that students have taken Genetics. In the past, the majority have taken math courses such as Calculus I and II because they are not offered at Bishop Neumann. In the future the

Rob echoed Heather sentiments. "We feel like we have to prove ourselves to the professors, the college students, our high school teachers, and our parents. But most importantly, we have to prove to ourselves that we can handle it."

In addition to the challenge, the students appreciate the opportunity to simply inter-act and compete with students on a college level.

Gab and Margaret agree that they are not treated any differently than anybody else in class. They have learned more about college life, made new friends, and gained a new sense of responsibility.

“The motivation behind Bishop Neumann’s involvement with Lycoming College is a mutual interest in today’s youth. Both schools want to provide challenges to the students beyond those normally offered in the average high school.”

College hopes to expand the number of courses attended by Neumann students to include foreign languages, art, and English classes.

The motivation behind Bishop Neumann’s involvement with Lycoming College is a mutual interest in today’s youth. Both schools want to provide challenges to the students beyond those normally offered in the average high school. And challenging is the word that is repeated whenever you talk with these five. “It’s not as easy as people think,” remarked Heather Chapman. “We are there from 2:00 to 4:30 or 5:00 P.M. on those three days. The tests are difficult and you have to study at least three nights or more to prepare for them.”

“They are nice enough to let us take these courses, so I’d like to prove my maturity and appreciation by doing the best I can,” Heather affirmed.

In order to provide all Bishop Neumann students with the opportunity to participate in Lycoming College classes, a scholarship was established with this specific goal. As a result, the school is able to cover one hundred percent of a student’s costs. This scholarship is guaranteed to all qualified students and the money comes from donations to the Neumann Annual Fund.

I, Elizabeth Lundy, have taken classes at Lycoming College. As a college-bound senior, I know that this experience will help me the next four years. I hope that all Neumann students realize what an opportunity we have . . . and take advantage of it.

The phone company did not cut us off the rest of the season (although we had to get a phone line repaired five minutes before a game at one football contest) but another interesting development occurred in week nine of the campaign. Bill and I were at Delaware Valley on a rainy Saturday to cover the Lycoming-Aggie matchup. Throughout the long ride to Delaware Valley, Bill told me several stories about announcing games outside in all types of weather. Through his stories, Byham ended up becoming a prophet.

When we arrived at Doylestown, it was extremely foggy and humid and the field was a large mud puddle. As soon as I entered the press box to set up our equipment I knew something was wrong - I could not see out. First of all, fog covered the field (it lifted for the second half), and it was so humid the windows of the press box, which of course would not come out, kept fogging up. The result of these conditions was that our equipment stayed nice and dry in the press box while Bill and I got soaked sitting in the top row of the bleachers broadcasting the game. What really counts though is the game apparently sounded fine.

"...Ken and I paid the price as the crowd looked at us like we were leftover crewmen from Star Trek."

Sitting amongst fans became another problem during the basketball season. In a classic example, my partner for basketball, Ken Weingartner, and I went to tiny Misericordia College in Dallas, PA, to cover a women's game between Lycoming and Misericordia. As it turned out, the Misericordia gym was in the basement of one of the few dorms on campus and had only four rows of bleachers on each side. It goes without saying that there were no press facilities.

Ken and I were forced to set up our equipment in the bleachers and broadcast the game with 75 not too pleasant parents and fans squished in with us. Needless to say, a radio broadcast had not originated there in years, and Ken and I paid the price as the crowd looked at us like we were left over crewmen from Star Trek. However, after we blocked out all the inquisitive looks and annoying personalities, we ended up with a good broadcast.

Misericordia did not seem all that bad to us a few weeks later. Ken and I were in our own friendly Lamade Gymnasium for a key MAC clash between Lycoming and Albright. After setting up our equipment, I noticed something was wrong with our headsets. A high-pitched tone was in the ear phones, and we could not hear each other when we talked. We tried everything to fix the mixer from moving every switch to pounding the mixer with our fists.

To no avail, the headsets would not work and we were forced to broadcast the game via our phone receiver. It wouldn't have been bad if we had two phones to use, but after furiously passing a single receiver back and forth while calling 40 minutes of basketball Ken and I were frustrated. As Ken said later, "I would take 10

Misericordia's over this." To this day we still do not know what was wrong with the mixer.

For our final broadcast of the year we traveled to Elizabethtown College as Lycoming finished its season with the Blue Jays. The contest did not mean much because the Warriors were out of the playoffs, but we still wanted to have a great final broadcast. However, what we got was no broadcast at all.

It turned out the phone company never installed our ordered phone line, and we could not carry the game. After discovering our "little" problem when we arrived, I immediately called the phone company which promised to send a repairman as soon as possible. Now, I knew we were doomed. After placing people at all the entrances for 45 minutes waiting for the non-existent repairman to show up, I knew our season was over before Lycoming's final contest had even begun. The phone company never sent a repairman and ended up paying us a lofty amount to cover the money we lost. However, their apologies and checks still do not make up for the lost broadcast.

Why do we broadcast games if we have to get wet, travel two hours for nothing, lose exciting moments from games, and put up with a hurried schedule? Is it for ego or self-fulfillment? Sure the broadcasting of sporting events the last few years has brought more listeners and quality to a station lacking in both. However, ego is not the reason. Despite the problems, it is fun, exciting and a great learning experience. I would not miss it for the world. After all, Vin and Joe had to start out somewhere, didn't they?

must be ratified by three-fourths of the states, and this rarely ever happens. On the other hand, it is much easier to amend the state constitutions. It is not nearly as difficult to get enough support for a new state constitution, because there are fewer people with whom to contend. Although states are by no means completely homogeneous, they are much more so than the U.S. as a whole. Regional problems tend to be much less important, although they are often a vital factor. Also, it is easier to find common ground within a smaller segment of the society. The fact that the U.S. is such a melting pot makes it extremely difficult even to amend the Constitution, let alone change it.

All of the aforementioned factors are possible contributors to the relative instability of the Pennsylvania Constitution. The extreme flexibility of the constitution of the United States of America has been its salvation over the past two-hundred years, and it is very likely that the trend will continue well into the future. Since a key aspect of a political system is the ability to adapt to change, one might wonder why the framers of the Commonwealth's Constitution didn't look to the National Constitution for a model.

Let's see - take "marking time" toward Lycoming sports history + "anxious" + "cautiously optimistic" and make them = "Positive." How is that for a base formula for previewing the 1987 fall sports picture at the home of the Warriors.

Head football coach Frank Girardi fills the first criteria of that formula as he was opening the new season just three wins shy of 100 career victories as a head coach.

After 15 years "G" was at 97-41-3 and with a .699 winning percentage. (Eighth best winning percentage for Division III coaches with 15 years or better of experience.)

As always, Girardi entered the new year with a positive attitude about his new edition. That despite the fact that he was playing this year without the services of All-American Larry Barretta, last season's national leader in total offense for NCAA Division III schools.

"You have to miss a player of Larry's calibre," said Girardi, "but we can't afford to dwell on that. We have a lot of people on hand who can play this game by our standards and by our tradition and we feel confident they will carry on."

The heir apparent to the vacant QB spot is senior Mike Kollhoff who has waited three years for his day of leading the Warriors into the Middle Atlantic Conference wars.

"Mike is a rare kind of young man. He has played a very important role for us over his time here but he was always overshadowed by Larry and others. He wants this challenge and we have every confidence he will handle it in a winning way," said Girardi.

Elsewhere, the Warriors will be returning a lot of outstanding experience, especially along their front seven on defense. It's that kind of experience that the G-men will use to head for their annual goal - winning of the very rugged MAC title.

J. Scott McNeill, Lycoming's most successful soccer coach, fills the anxious part of our formula. His 1986 Warrior booters suffered through an injury riddled season. Several of those players are now gone so McNeill has opened this new season with a "repaired" roster headlined by Jamaican-born Courtney Walters. He also was introducing several first year players to soccer at the collegiate level.

"All of this makes me very anxious to see how our veterans and our rookies blend for what will be a very exacting season.

"Knowing these players and their respective talents I feel positive that we can be a force among our opposition," said McNeill just prior to the season.

McNeill has added a new attraction to the Lycoming sports face. The first ever Warrior Soccer Classic was held on campus over a Saturday and Sunday (September 5-6) with three other teams invited in for the two day tourney. McNeill has hopes that the pre-season Classic will become a permanent part of Lycoming soccer.

Mike Kollhoff — "He wants the challenge."

The "optimism mixed with caution" part of the formula belongs with Janis Arp and Jim Burget.

Arp handles the field hockey team and will, for the first time, have depth on her team. In the past two seasons her teams have played to 5-5 seasons with a bare roster on hand. It takes 11 players to field a team and the Lady Warriors were dressing around 12 and 13 for games. This year the roster was up to around 24 and that included 14 recruited first year players.

"With the added depth," said Arp, in her 4th year, "we hope to break into a winning season for the first time. I know I feel more positive about that than at any time since I came here to coach. Most of that positive feeling comes from the players returning. They are good players, dedicated and will demonstrate leadership to the freshmen."

Burget is in his first season at the head of the combined men and women's cross country program. This sport is only into its 5th year at Lycoming and, like field hockey, has not yet enjoyed a winning season.

"We are optimistic because we have had a good recruiting year," said Burget, who has had a very successful coaching career at the high school level.

"We feel we are into a very positive position with those coming back and adding in those who are joining us for the first time."

So - in a sports nutshell we have the Fall of 1987. "Football coaching history, anxiousness and cautious optimism equalling positive."

Oh! One more thing. All of these young people in these sports appreciate fan support. The more the better so a word to the Lycoming family - C'mon in and catch Warrior fever!!

A story with TWO happy endings! That summarizes the 1986-87 campaign year for Lycoming College.

The first was a successful conclusion to the Lycoming College Fund. With a goal of $300,000 in unrestricted gifts, alumni and friends, corporations, foundations and others contributed $332,476—an increase over the 1985-86 fund year by 16.7 per cent. This effort, led by national chairperson Marguerite Gehron Rich (Mrs. John VI), represented yet another new mark in annual fund contributions. Total individuals contributing to the campaign numbered 2,443, an increase of 12.9 per cent over 1985-86.

The second "happy ending" was provided when record alumni contributions to the LCF exceeded the challenge set by the Surdna Foundation, Inc. of New York City. Surdna offered $50,000 toward scholarship endowment provided Lycoming alumni exceed their record-level unrestricted contributions of 1985-86 by at least $25,000. Final figures indicate an increase of $30,426—more than 21 per cent above the goal.

College President Frederick E. Blumer summarized the successful year by saying that "the response to our need has been extremely gratifying. Small, liberal arts colleges do indeed have an important role to play in the lives of today's students, and we are grateful that others are willing to invest with us in their future."

The campaign concludes a year-long celebration of the College's 175th anniversary.

Memorials

During the 1986-87 fiscal year, gifts were received in memory of the following people or for new or established memorial funds.

In memory of:

- Dr. Sheridan W. Bell
- Mr. Walter Heim
- Mrs. Gertrude B. Madden
- Mrs. Sarah Shuey North
- The Ronald Beemer Memorial Scholarship Fund
- The Morton Rauff Memorial Scholarship Fund
- The Christopher Adam & Harriet Jane Rubright Family
- The Nathan A. Scheib Memorial Music Fund
- The Samuel Willard Memorial Scholarship Fund

Gifts made to Lycoming College in memory of a friend or loved one hold special significance for both the donor and the College. Such gifts are encouraged and fully respected in all regards.

Many alumni and friends make large gifts to the College through a properly prepared will or by a trust arrangement that becomes effective in accord with one's own estate plans. There are annuities and "living" trust arrangements, too, that provide income for life and a deferred gift to the College. Many of our currently endowed scholarships were established in this manner.

Marshall E. Sanders '36, served as Class Agent for the Heritage Classes of Williamsport Dickinson Seminary and Junior College (1913 - 1948).

Ten eager travelers, all with expectations varying from seeing the historic landmarks and points of interest in Austria to hearing the beautiful music, accompanied Dr. Gary Boerckel to the land of the waltzes.

Our "good time" started even before the trip. Dr. Boerckel gave us five prep sessions over three days covering material ranging from the history of Austria through architectural stylings to background and trends in music covering composers from Haydn to Tchaikovsky and Strauss. These were informative as well as fun. We got to meet each other and become prepared for the visit. This served to heighten our enthusiasm for the trip.

While each of us might relate different highlights and small details of pleasure, some "joys" were universal with us all. The magnitude of our first castle - Nymphenburg, the former home of the royal family in Munich, was "larger than life." Our short visit in Oberammergau after having heard the story of the Plague and the courage and dedication of the local priest and villagers who survived and kept their promise to present the story of the passion of our Lord every 10 years moved everyone.

We saw the spirit and pride reflected in neat, colorfully painted cottage-homes and flower accented front yards.

Flowers abounded everywhere, culminating in the little village square with tulips in neat tight-spaced rows shouting for attention. Everyone enjoyed Salzburg and wished to stay there and not move on! The fact that our guide was a native of Salzburg plus the small, walkable size of old Salzburg, gave each of us the feeling that we really got to "taste the flavor" of this quaint, old, gem-of-a-city. Seeing Mozart's birthplace and attending the opera "The Bartered Bride" assured Salzburg a place in the highlights of our trip.

The long-awaited boat ride down the "Blue" Danube proved to be more than we expected. There were many castles overlooking villages and churches. A highlight for most was the castle where the English king, Richard the Lionhearted, was imprisoned. A faithful minstrel went from castle to castle singing Richard's favorite songs until he found him and gained his release. We next moved on to Vienna, a graceful, stately giant compared to old Salzburg. Our treasured memories of Vienna are as varied as the city itself.

None of us will forget the street car rides and the Belvedere Palace (pictured above), originally built for Prince Eugene of Savoy. The handsome Lipizzan horses performing their strutting maneuvers with controlled strength and grace of movement impressed us all.

We won't forget walking streets like the one pictured above. They are common in European countries and are dotted with flower vendors, cafes and small shops and stands. We felt we experienced the true flavor of the country as we walked along the streets, observed the sites, interacted with the people, experienced the customs and tasted the food typical of the region. However, after several musical recitals, concerts and operas our magnificent finale was about to take place. The high point for everyone was hearing Verdi's Othello in the grand Vienna Opera Hall with Zubin Mehta conducting. This was the perfect ending to the trip. The production was perfect in every detail: stage, sets, exquisite voices and superb conducting by Mehta, truly a musical thrill for us all!

We were left with a feeling of fulfilled satisfaction and an abundance of warm, rosy memories.

Lycoming Alumni may next visit ENGLAND with Dr. John F. Piper, Jr., Professor of History.

201 COLLEGE
LEWISBURG, PA 17701-5192

Hello from all of us in the Admissions and Financial Aid Office!

As we gear up for the new recruiting season, we would like to thank our alumni who assisted us with last year's recruitment efforts. Your participation was one of the factors leading to a significant increase in the size of this year's freshman class. Twenty-four alumni represented Lycoming at college nights and fairs, and forty-four alumni made congratulatory calls to accepted students. Presently, we are looking at a class of 380 students, or more. Most importantly, the incoming freshmen were accepted from more selective academic standards.

Again, our thanks to everyone for your time and energy. In closing, we are looking forward to another productive year in recruitment for Lycoming College.
